FINALLY, HE REACHES THE MANHOLE ENTRANCE TO HIS HOME...

... AND HE LEAVES ...

Graphics: What new projects will you be working on this summer?

Ray Earles: Well, since this is the first REAL opening of Turbo, I'll mostly be doing the old titles like Actron, Piro (if I ever get the chance!), and the NEW 1/2 Dead series. But if I ever get time in my schedule, I want to pick up the art on The Super Sonic limited series. AS for my new projects, I'll be writing and penciling an ongoing Raven series.

T.G.: Who will be inking the series?

R.E.: Jeremy Wininger may be inking the series, but I'd like to get some new talent in on the ground floor of the project. Jeremy Wininger WILL be handling the coloring chores for the series though.

T.G.: Will the Raven series cover his origin or go on with new tales?

R.E.: It will mostly cover new stories about The Raven's life outside the Actron team. I'm hoping it will sell well enough that people will start picking up copies of Actron to see him in action.

T.B.: How are the sales on Actron at this point?

R.E.: They're really good right now. I'm trying to get alot of spin offs out that relate to Actron, so when and if they acquire a following, I can lead them off on their own stories.

T.B.: You talked earlier of a Piro series, hasn't that been a long delayed series?

R.E.: Yes, we were originally going to do it back in 87, but things just never got off the ground. But if the good sales keep up on Actron, we should have enough of a following this time.

T.B.: Do you have any plans for an Actron or Raven graphic novel?

R.E.: Yes I'm working on plotting it right now, it should be out by early next year at about the same time as the Piro series starts.

T.B.: Well, it's been nice talking to you, keep up the good work.
